Barbican path connection to "Porta de Évora"

Several interventions in the doors and passages allow full circulation along the path to Barbican. At the Porta de Évora, the staircase was partially destroyed, and some remaining steps can still be identified, as well as the perimeter of its location and morphology.

In conjunction with the structural consolidation work of the walls of Monsaraz and in particular the interior of the opening of the wall next to the Porta de Évora, the reconstruction and consolidation of this staircase in schist masonry was carried out, guaranteeing the restoration of its previous shape in an essential and simplified design. Once again the regularity of the equipment to be executed and the use of air lime-based mortar will allow this addition to be documented and distinguished from the original parts.
